Open the Chrome browser in your Android device, head over to "tab view" by tapping on the tab button. Swipe up over the tab view five times and the browser will do a barrel roll.

contacted". Do note, this is based on the frequency of chat and not necessarily the total number of text or media shared with said contact.

On iOS, you can go to Settings > Data and Storage Use > Storage Use. Just like Android, a list of all your contacts will be presented and you can tap on each contact to check how much text and media you've exchanged between each other. Now if you go ahead and use this as an effective measure for your friendship then that's on you.

USE VOICE TYPING IN GOOGLE DOCS

Rather than tediously typing into Google Docs, you can simply use the in-built voice typing tool to enter your spoken words as text. Do note, this isn't meant to completely replace typing since at times you might face issues while adding punctuation. To enable voice typing, go to Tools > Voice Typing. You can also use the shortcut "Ctrl+Shift+S". Allow Chrome the required permissions to use your microphone and when the mic icon turns red, speak out. The tool works most of the time and in order to do that, you need to speak clearly. Although, we did face significant issues while adding commas or periods.

SWIPE ACROSS MULTIPLE TABS

If most of your online reading is done on the phone or an Android device, there must be countless tabs open in Chrome. Did you know if you open about 100 tabs in the Chrome Android app, the number in the tabs button changes to a ":D" emoji?

Anyway, you can use the tab view to switch between different tabs but if you have only two or three tabs to deal with, there's an easier way. Rather than two steps, all you need to do is swipe left or right over the address bar and you can explore the open tabs quite easily.

EXTRA FUNCTIONS IN START MENU

Apart from the regular start menu displayed in Windows 10, you have another start menu hidden in the same button. All you need to do is right-click on the start button and a different menu will pop up. Although, most of the options shown in this text-only menu is already available in the normal menu, you get a few more options and it loads faster. 🇮🇳
