

Robots on Guinness

A total of 1,069 robots in China broke the Guinness World Record for the "most robots dancing simultaneously". <http://digit.in/BotRecord>

A surprise on Bing's homepage

There was a gigantic male phallus drawn on Bing's homepage and someone managed to take a screenshot. <http://digit.in/BingDong>

If I would have purchased a ₹7000 phone which supports 4g Band 1 (2100 MHz) like Lenovo or Motorola I would not have faced this problem in both circles.

For me it means either port the connection or purchase a new smartphone that supports all bands.

—Tejas Malpani

d Dear Tejas,
Thank you for your suggestion. We do realise the importance of information regarding network band support with respect to handsets.

While we do capture this information during our review process, we currently don't have them displayed under the specifications section.

We shall certainly take your suggestion and bring it upfront in our specs section. Of course, it'll take a bit of time to make it universally available across the site but rest assured we are working on it.

 I would recommend to all the Digit team members to watch the anime movie Summer Wars (in dub if possible) at least one time. This movie amazingly shows the consequences if an A. I. gets out of hand and has a mind of its own.

—Abhishek Solanki

d Hey Abhishek,
Some of us have watched Summer Wars and liked it quite a bit. I watched the subbed version, however. I seem to prefer subs over dubs in general. It was quite an interesting concept, a scenario which we could potentially be heading towards! In a world where pretty much all of our needs are handled by a single AI, what would happen if that AI were to go rogue?

I've told the guys here to watch it (along with a few other anime suggestions) at least once too, which they still haven't. Hopefully, your email does a better job of convincing them to watch it than I did!

—Manish

 Started when I was 14. Still reading... No complaints. Only one word for you guys,
"The Best!" (Sorry that's two words

). Keep up the Good work!

—Febin S

d Happy to oblige Febin. Keep up the good feedback!

 Hey there team Digit!
My brother has made an Android game that I would want you guys to check out. It's called Mayajaa. Here is the link: <https://goo.gl/A9DDvb>

Please share about the game with the SKOAR community if you feel so.

Waiting for your reply.

—Tanishq Khare

d Sure thing, we'll check it out. But for being featured with a full review it'll have to have a bare minimum quality. We've forwarded the game to the person who reviews mobile games.

It will be featured if found to be among the best that we've seen this month. On the bright side, since we're featuring your letter, curious readers might just check out the game as well. Who knows

Letter of the Month

Hello Team Digit,

Honestly, this month's Digit issue wasn't quite appealing. Putting it bluntly, kinda boring. The articles weren't that great except 2-3 like the 'Steam Killers', game demos etc. Neither was anything interesting provided in the DVD. I don't know maybe it's because there wasn't much news this time around as you guys always say you give your best. So it's not much of a problem by your side.

Coming towards others, as mentioned earlier, articles about Steam, 'Where have the game demos gone?', Dymystify and FastTrack were quite good.

So yeah, this time its a critic based review from my side (normally that does not happen ) but I'm expecting an awesome mag next month because it's gamescom this month.

Well, there is a small request from my side, I missed out on the mag last month, and I'm a huge Forza fan, so it would be awesome, if you can provide me with that last month's poster...

Thanks, Peace.

—Himanshu Kumar

d Hey Himanshu,

Thanks for your feedback. Please don't be hesitant even if the feedback is critical. It is only through constructive feedback that we will continuously be able to improve our quality. Now to address your feedback one by one.

1. Yes perhaps the india-specific articles could've been made more interesting by having a few more asides and interesting trivia/facts. While we tried to keep things objective, perhaps we got a little carried away by the patriotic spirit.
2. It seems to me that your preference for content lies in gaming. There's only so much of gaming we can do in the mag. Have you followed our SKOAR Facebook page (<https://www.facebook.com/skoar>) for the latest updates?
3. About Gamescom, we couldn't include any coverage in the mag because it ended after we sent the mag to print  But go to www.skoar.in for our take on the whole event.
4. Let me check if there are any Forza posters around.

—Siddharth
