

GET YOUR ANIME FIX

Anime has been around for a long time but it's only recently become more mainstream, what with even Netflix starting to announce and air anime. We get that getting into it can be a bit overwhelming but it doesn't have to be! Let's sort you out.

15 Identify your anime

This can be quite overwhelming, there's a lot of good anime out there but where do we start? Should we start with the names that are frequently thrown about? What was it, Naturo? Naruto? Ok let's check that out- WTF?! 500 episodes?! Err... No thanks.

That's usually the first reaction we get. Which is why we're not even going to suggest those. We're going to ease you in with some of the really good (most of which you've probably already heard about) short ones.

- Fullmetal Alchemist: Brotherhood: You've probably heard of FMA and we'll guarantee you you've only heard good things. Not be confused with Fullmetal Alchemist which aired around 6 years prior to it.

- Code Geass: This is an interesting anime which has it all, political intrigue, big explosions, super powers, mechs, and a good plot.
- Death Note: Don't let the recent Netflix movie stop you from watching this. They only bothered with a live action version because the anime is that good.
- Boku no Hero Academia: The second season for this show is still airing, but we think this is a great shounen (this is an anime genre) anime for anyone to start with that isn't over 100 episodes long.

- One Punch Man: Even though the show's mostly a satire making fun of shounen and superhero anime, it's extremely well animated and extremely hilarious. It's just the right kind of extreme.
- Nichijou: This is a slice-of-life anime (another anime genre, don't worry you'll get familiar with this as you get into the whole thing) which also went by the name My Ordinary Life. It's hilarious. That's it.
- Hajime no Ippo: Think Rocky, but the anime version. Different story, don't worry.
- Cowboy Bebop: Sci-fi space cowboy anime that everybody has probably heard about. It's a good show with a great soundtrack, albeit a bit complicated.

Just start with eight. Let us know when you're done with them and we'll throw more at you.

16 Watch anime

Now that you know what to watch, let's get to where you can watch them. Legally, there's one website which should satisfy all your anime needs, and that's Crunchyroll. However, it's not free and you're required to pay a subscription in order to enjoy all of its services. There are other services but they're limited by region, Animelab for example is limited to Australia and New Zealand while FUNimation is limited to mostly the United States. Nothing a VPN can't fix.

Daisuki used to be an option but, unfortunately, is shutting down as of October 30, 2017. However, there are several other "free" alternatives out there, but we can't mention them here for obvious reasons.

17 Track and discover anime

We can't keep recommending anime to you. It can be quite difficult to keep track of all the anime you've watched and all the new upcoming anime which release every season. This is where a website like MyAnimeList comes in handy. Sure, most online streaming sites offer some form tracking services, but MyAnimeList specialises at this.

It not only features anime, but manga as well. You can keep track of every anime on an episode by episode basis and you have access to a lot of information about the anime, from a synopsis, to the cast, the opening and ending credits song, attributed manga/anime, i.e., prequels and sequels etc. You can categorise anime under currently watching, plan to watch, dropped, on hold etc. And you can rate anime you add to the list and even see the congregate rating for the anime by the MAL community. This is a great feature to have when gauging whether or not to watch an anime.

Which brings us to the other great thing about MAL, it's a great website to discover new anime. In addition to letting you know all the currently airing seasonal anime, it frequently suggests anime to you based on anime you've added to your list. In addition to that, every anime has a suggestions section at the bottom where users suggest similar anime. Enjoy!
