

ORGANISE A GEEK PARTY

Someone wise once said, "if you want to know what a real party is like, let a geek organise it for you". Actually, no, no-one has probably ever said that, like in the history of mankind. We might actually be the first ever! Thanks to the way things are now, a geek party would actually be cool, and even have representation of more than one gender! You can do one or all five of the suggestions below. Let us know which ones you did attempt at your next party. Without further ado, here's how to organise a geek party:

36 Send the geekiest invites possible

You need an appealing invitation to make all geeks come to your yard. What better way than to make it out in Klingon, or even Elvish! Just head on over to funtranslations.com, they have a wide selection of popular fictional languages and styles to choose from, including Klingon, Elvish, Yoda-speak and Pirate.

37 Sci-Fi lighting

Normal lights just won't do. You could go simple and get strips of LEDs and simply connect them to a power outlet and line the entire house with them. This makes for an eerie, sci-fi ambience. Or you can take it one notch further by getting stuff like the Plasma ball (<http://digit.in/PlsmBall>).

38 Board games are passe, download these apps

If you're hosting a party then you obviously need to have activities planned. By activities we obviously mean fun and games. What's a party without all that? But old school board games are out of the equation, everyone has a smartphone these days, so why not use them! Download these party apps to have a swell time.

Bounden: An interesting game that needs two players to play, each holding the phone at one end and dancing according to the instructions on the app.

Heads up! Charades: This game needs no introduction. Everybody knows what charades are, Heads up! Simply brings the format to your smartphones in an easy and fun way for all those participating.

Evil Minds: Dirty Charades!: This one might be slightly NSFW but then again, it's a party not work. Evil minds adds an adult twist to charades to spice up your parties.

Party doodles: Think pictionary the app. If you don't know what pictionary is, you basically get a word and you need to draw it while everyone else tries to guess the word before the timer runs out. This is iOS only but it's compatible with Apple TV, so you can draw on the big screen too.

Sing! Karaoke: You could say that no party is complete without karaoke. No app does it better than Sing! With a wide selection of songs and many different competitive modes to choose from.

39 Geeky-fy the music with apps

There's more to party music than just playing the right music. Checkout the app AmpMe to actually sync playback across everyone's smartphone. And then, connect all of them to speakers to have a massive in-sync indoor concert! You could also use karaoke apps like Sing! Karaoke by Smule and get yourself a karaoke mic to have your very own karaoke night!

40 You have to have a geeky theme

This one never fails.

Ask everyone to dress up as their favorite pop culture character and then be amazed at what people pull off – or don't.

