

TV SHOW

Narcos S3

★★★★☆ | Narcos is synonymous with Wagner Moura's depiction of Pablo Escobar. From the moment he appeared on screen and delivered the spine tingling phrase, "Yo soy Pablo Emilio Escobar Gaviria" ("I am Pablo Emilio Escobar Gaviria"), that grabbed the attention of not only all the characters in the scene but even every single viewer, to the moment when he died atop a roof in what can be called, a manner not befitting the biggest narco drug lord of his time; it was just Pablo. So when you kill off your central character in the second season, what hope do you have for the show to go on? Quite a bit, apparently. After all, that's why the show is called Narcos and not Pablo.

The focus is now on Pedro Pascal's Agent Javier Peña who has after putting the cuffs on the biggest Narco (read Pablo Escobar) in the world received a pretty decent promotion. And not just from the point of view of the character but even the show because now the narration happens from Agent Peña's perspective.

Season 2 was a downer because of its slow pace and the impending doom that awaited the central character. Which is why Season 3 feels so much better. However, the characters are simply not strong enough for there to be more than one season to be devoted to the Cali Cartel. We'd say Season 1 was the best so far with Season 3 coming in at a close second.

ANIME

So you want to start watching anime but don't know where to start? Or you just refrain yourself from trying those never-ending series with hundred of episodes which your 'otaku' friend keeps recommending. Well, here we have three 'short' anime movies for you to check out:

Koe no Katachi

★★★★☆ | Translated as A Silent Voice or The Shape of Voice, is a tale about a highschool boy

named Shouya who is constantly been haunted by his past and is trying to redeem himself. The story portrays the concept of karma and how it can affect your life.

Bakemono no Ko

★★★★☆ | Nine-year-old Ren is disheartened after losing his mother in a tragic accident and decides to flee from home. He gets lost on the way and finds himself in a very strange land, where he meets Kumatestu and decides to become his disciple and train.

Kimi no Na wa

★★★★★ | Mitsuha wakes up one day in a room that is not hers and finds herself living in Tokyo in Taki's body. Meanwhile, Taki finds himself living in Mitsuha's body in the countryside. In the pursuits of finding an answer to the strange phenomenon, they begin to look for one another.

UP AND COMING

MOVIE

The Foreigner

We've seen Jackie Chan do action movies, but never like this. When you think Jackie Chan, you think action-comedy with bloopers at the end of the movie, but the Foreigner has a much more serious tone to it.

TV SHOW

Lucifer S3

Lucifer is back with its third season, with the previous season ending on a cliffhanger. We explore the origins of Lucifer Morningstar and how he came to be what he is.

TV SHOW

The Gifted

Set in Fox's X-Men universe, the Gifted revolves around a family who discover that their kids have mutant powers and have to go on the run. We don't know where in the timeline it's set but it looks interesting.
