

GEEK CULTURE IS OUR WAY OF LIFE, AND ENCOMPASSES MOVIES, GAMES, COMICS, AND TRENDS FROM ACROSS THE GLOBE

YOU CAN'T SEE ME

John Cena might be casted as Shazam and we are stoked about it. This month, one of us goes on to rant how rushed game development is bad, Booman losing it on the iPhone X, and few interesting discussions from our forums. Also, don't miss what went on in the labs while writing this magazine.

What's with these all-white paintings?

If you've ever been to an art museum, you might have seen an all-white painting like this. What you might not have known is that this one in particular, is the "Bridge" by Robert Ryman (1980) which was sold for a whopping $20.6 million. <http://dgit.in/20Mwhite>

WHAT'S NEW

John Cena could be Shazam!

Will you be able to see him if he is cast as the DC superhero? Jokes apart, we expect some high octane wrestling action with Dwayne Johnson's Black Adam!

DC Comics has been trying hard to get a strong hold on to the superhero movie market and with the runaway success that Wonder Woman was, we could be looking at that becoming a successful attempt. Another movie that could be really crucial for that is the upcoming Shazam!, with director David F. Sandberg recently announcing that pre-production was underway of the DC Comics adaptation. And with that announcement, we are already getting reports of rumoured casting confirmations – WWE Wrestler John Cena is apparently a frontrunner for the role, along with Joshua Sasse, British actor of Galavant fame.

The movie is set to start filming February 2018 and we should have much more details as the date draws nearer.

<http://dgit.in/JCezam>

More competition for Netflix

Disney's streaming service is slowly nearing reality and it already looks to be tough competition for the likes of Netflix, even before it has an official name. As per Disney CEO Bob Iger, Marvel and Star Wars films and TV franchises will change homes and move out of Netflix for good, starting 2019.

The new streaming service is set to launch in 2019 and will offer original Disney movie productions, Marvel movies, Star Wars franchise, and Pixar films. Disney will stream Marvel and Star Wars content exclusively and no other service will house the same.

All the original Marvel TV shows on Netflix, including

Jessica Jones, Daredevil, Luke Cage, etc will remain on the platform. However, reports suggest that as part of the Marvel Cinematic Universe, The Defenders might move to Disney. Looks like Netflix has one more year to work with the sequel to The Defenders, but we don't know how this latest development will affect the continuation of the superhero series on the platform.

<http://dgit.in/DisneyFlix>

A present-day Game of Thrones

A Lannister Prime Minister has to give a speech to his citizens to calm them down about fears of things coming over the wall. A direwolf steps out of a limousine. Protesters wave the Stark sigil against smoke bombs. This new fan-made trailer takes Game of Thrones to the future.

<http://dgit.in/FutureGOT>

Filming of Episode IX has ended

Star Wars: Episode IX is nearing its December release and it has finally finished filming. There's a lot of anticipation behind the movie after the trailer was revealed, on the fate of the Rey and Luke. Expecting the second trailer to come out any time now.

<http://dgit.in/SWIXEnd>

Star-studded anime?

Netflix's upcoming anime Neo Yokio is a satirical/parody take on the Shonen genre. The main protagonist is voiced by Jaden Smith and his butler by Jude Law. Rest of the cast includes Susan Sarandon, Tavi Gevinson, Jason Schwartzman, the Kid Mero, Desus Nice, Willow Smith, etc.

<http://dgit.in/NeoYokio>