Proof of Work Shortlinks

If you have an URL you'd like to forward your users to, you can create a cnhv.co shortlink to it. The user has to solves a number of hashes (adjustable by you) and is automatically forwarded to the target URL afterwards. Example: cnhv.co/71un (Find out where it takes you!).

You can create shortlinks directly in your control panel or through CoinHive's API via the endpoint "/link/create"

CONCLUSION

If ethical practices are enforced, then this looks like a promising new way by which websites with high numbers of visitors or websites where users tend to stay on for longer time periods may choose to serve ad-free content and yet make profits out of their websites. However, small websites or low visit count blogs may not be able to sustain even their minimal operating costs from the proceeds of browser based client-side mining. And even if it doesn't turn out to be significant, it will reduce the burden on ads alone to generate revenue for a website.

Nevertheless, it's an interesting development and can find innovative applications in the wide world of the internet. It is suggested that before implementing such solutions check the legal aspects related to these in accordance to the laws of the land where you reside and operate from. Also, keep your users in good faith and they will appreciate the gesture and praise you for sticking to an ethical code. Just be up front about any mining activity on your website.
