SYNC
ABOUT:CONFIG PREFERENCES WITH FIREFOX SYNC

Firefox's sync feature, helpfully titled Firefox Sync, helps you sync, among other things, your browser preferences across devices. While these preferences can also be set from the Options menu, another popular way to do it is through the about:config page. But there are certain steps you need to follow to make sure that these changes are also synced by Firefox.

Go to the about:config page and right click on the preference that you want to sync – right click and select Copy Name. Now, right click again, select New>Boolean. In the preference name field, enter services.sync.prefs.setting where you need to replace setting with the name of the preference you copied earlier. In the Value field, set to True and you're done.

MASTER YOUR EMAILS WITH BOOMERANG

Boomerang is quite a popular email add-on that supercharges your email experience by enabling quite a few features that are not available with traditional email.

- Such as:
- Put a reminder on an email, at which time it will appear on the top of your inbox. This is handy for important emails that you can't attend to immediately. Click the Boomerang button on any email to do so.
