

Google hired Apple chip guy

Google is still snapping up Apple's chip design talent as part of its ongoing quest to create custom processors <http://digit.in/GvsAChip>

OnePlus 6 with on screen fingerprint

After the recent launch of OnePlus 5T, OnePlus 6 to reportedly launch in March with its fingerprint scanner under the screen. <http://digit.in/OP6FPCanr> the December issue, submitted by Mr Mathew Jacob advising if we can cut out the DVD in the pack to which Siddharth explained this to be necessary as this goes to remote corners of our country.

My suggestion, can we have a page to opt out of these DVDs from our subscription. There need not be any financial incentive, however, most of us care about our environment and avoid clutter as well. I'm sure there are lots of people who don't require this DVD. My Mac doesn't even have a DVD reader.

—Ishan Garg

d The logistics behind managing this is a nightmare, and would actually cost us a lot of money to try and do this. Let's assume even a small minority want this. Let's take a random figure of 2,367 people who want an issue without a DVD.

Now, let's look at the complexity of achieving this. I can reduce my DVD order by 2,000, but it won't save me any money for a year at least (bulk rates are given to us on the basis of an assured order every month for a two year contract). I also can't reduce it by 2,367, it has to be multiples of 2,000.

Digit is packed by hand, by labourers. Assume 100 people pack 100 copies each in a 3 hour shift. That's 10,000 copies in 3 hours. In the last shift I will have 2,000 less DVDs than other things. This is going to cause confusion amongst the labourers. On top of that, I have to pay someone to count and remove another 367 DVDs from the pile. Next, assuming I can get all this done, I have to ensure that those 2,367 copies are handled completely differently.

Then, I have to make sure this bundle of 2,367 is labelled correctly and sent to the right people. Remember that every mistake that's made will cost me courier charges to correct. When someone doesn't get a DVD (or even if they get a non-functioning one) it costs me courier money to send them a replacement.

At the end of it all I lose terribly. Now let's assume that I bear this cost for the sake of the environment. Turns out, I won't be making a difference. The confusion caused, the extra man hours spent (all backed by electricity and air conditioning) and the additional energy costs of couriers to make up for an increase of even a mere 50 errors a month and we'd be causing more environmental damage than we're stopping. Besides, DVDs are being recycled now in major cities (which is where the people who don't want DVDs live).

Now if 10k+ people didn't want a DVD, then we'd be in business. However, I don't think even 2k would agree.

—Robert

Hi, I am an avid reader of Digit, my dad introduced me to you guys and I love reading Digit. I just got the December magazine and I love the calendar. I have also just built a new rig using Ryzen 5 1600 and GTX 1060 6 GB and was pleased to find a similar build in the magazine.

However you have included the Ryzen 5 1600X which doesn't have its own cooling solution so an external heat sink is required which you guys haven't added. Please look into that as it does increase the overall price.

—Kaushik Raikar

Ahh, my bad. That was supposed to be a Ryzen 5 1600 and not the 1600X. Honestly, getting the 1600X isn't that big an upgrade and the overclocking benefits of switching to the 1600X aren't that great either. Instead, you're better off investing in a better RAM that can clock higher. Ryzen CPUs give better performance with faster RAM.

—Mithun

This December issue is amazing!
• First of all I want you to know that I am a YouTuber and for 2-3 weeks my friend and I were thinking about that YouTube channel "Make joke of" and how they make their videos using Blender and then you guys give us Blender in the DVD. You read our minds.

- Thanks for that Geek Calendar 2018, because there were lots of things I didn't know.
- I am not very into cars, but this is a thank you from my friend who has a relationship with cars the way people have with girlfriends.

—O.I.

Hey O.I., we wish we knew your real name, but we understand if sometimes you want to stay anonymous. Just remember that such anonymous feedback is automatically disqualified from being letter of the month and winning our mystery gift.

—Arnab

Looks Like my prayers have been heard by the "geek" god. I just received my mag and do you remember that feeling when you have completed a very tough level of a game? Well In my case I got that satisfaction when I opened the parcel. That extra Package (dgt AUTO) Was like the gift that you receive for your loyalty (subscription).

I'm 16 and I love only two things – Cyber Security and Digit.

What I like about the mag:

1. The content is fking awesome
2. The comparisons – because I read many other magazines and they compare only the specs, but you guys compare everything.
3. Delivery service, because how you get so many thousands of mags to everyone on time is mind boggling
What I don't like: other mags (lol)
1. Your website it is too crowded.
2. The devworx website, because nothing works and it is vulnerable to xss attacks, now patched, phew!!!!
3. The posters – they are always game related. Try something new.

I love SKOAR, and dmystify took the game to a whole new level (I like it a lot). The DVDs are like 'chota packet bada dhamaka' things. Keep up the dedication and hard work you put into the mag. Love you guys bye.

—Vibhakar Solanki

Wow, thanks for the feedback! We will work on our site, and we promise to try and fix the devworx site as well. You will be glad to see the poster in this issue, as we are moving to Digit Auto posters for a few months.

—Abhijit