Planning your day before heading out is one of the traits that will definitely boost your productivity. There are several habits that you can condition yourself to follow with the help of apps on your smartphone. Using these apps regularly will ensure that you can accomplish more in a single day. This can only be done by cutting down on distractions and introducing new techniques of multitasking with the smartphone in your pocket. It doesn't matter whether you're a working professional or a student. You will surely find some apps from the list below that you can incorporate into your daily lives. The following apps aren't listed in any order of usefulness. We won't be including the regular productivity apps such as calendars, file managers, note taking apps, password managers, or probably the most popular productivity app IFTTT.

7 MINUTE WORKOUT

One of the best habits that you should introduce into your daily routine is working out. Some people don't find it feasible to hit the gym for several reasons. If you're among those then there are several apps out there that present you a list of exercises you can follow at home. Still wondering whether you can invest time in working out even at home? The 7 Minute Workout app requires you to spend only seven minutes everyday and nothing more. Workouts are divided into five basic routines including Classic, Abs, Butt, Leg and Arm. Apart from these, you will also find a 30 day challenge routine for a full body workout and a set of stretching exercises before going to sleep. All of these routines have a set of exercises assigned with strict timings, all adding up to seven minutes.

DIRECTCHAT

Are you the kind of person who spends a lot of time texting friends across different apps? Switching between them can be quite a pain. Well, all of this can be done right from your homescreen using DirectChat. The app reads notifications from social media and IM apps and throws them in chat bubbles individually for every app. This allows you to read and reply to those messages right from those chat bubbles without opening every other app. Most of the supported and installed apps are automatically detected. Apps such as Facebook Messenger, Hangouts, Instagram, WhatsApp and Twitter were automatically listed in our case. You can add more apps such as LinkedIn or your SMS app.

FAST FINDER

The Fast Finder app lets you search for apps that are installed on your phone without needing to open your file manager. Apart from apps, you can even search through images and documents as well. The app stays true to its name because as soon as you start typing, a dropdown menu appears listing down all the matching files. Advanced file search is also supported – you can search using file types or extensions such as 'gif' or 'jpg'. Another interesting feature is the ability to search within an app. So, if you type 'oscars', then the app gives you options of Google Search, your web browser, Play Store, YouTube, etc.
