SOLO: A STAR WARS STORY

Release Date: 25 May

Breaking a three year streak, there will not be a Star Wars movie releasing this December. The story follows the adventures of a young Han

Solo played by Alden Ehrenreich. The film may contain the exploits of Solo only alluded to in the films, including the legendary Kessel run, as well as the game of sabacc.

JURASSIC WORLD: FALLEN KINGDOM

Release Date: 22 June

Chris Pratt returns to Blue the velociraptor in this sequel to Jurassic World. This time, the rescue mission is to actually save the dinosaurs from a volcano that is about to erupt. While this is going to be an action and CGI fest, expect some explorations of the legal and moral challenges of genetic engineering as well.

ANT-MAN AND THE WASP

Release Date: 6 July

At the end of Ant-Man, we saw the suit that Hank Pym was building with Janet van Dyne before she got lost in the quantum realm, maybe not forever. In this movie, we will see Ant-Man and the Wasp team up, and hopefully some ants will join in on the action. We will also be seeing more of the quantum realm.

DEADPOOL 2

Release Date: 1 June

Deadpool returns for a sequel. The movie still does not officially have a name, but the fake working title in America is "Love Machine". The eccentric trailer shows Deadpool imitating Bob Ross teaching TV audiences how to paint. Expect a self referential and outrageous marketing blitz in the run up to the release.

FANTASTIC BEASTS: THE CRIMES OF GRINDELWALD

Release Date: 16 November

We can expect to see plenty of magical creatures interacting in weird and wonderful ways with the magizoologist Newt Scamander. Audiences will also get to explore the past of Albus Dumbledore and his rival Gellert Grindelwald. The promotional material refers to a certain Maledictus, which does not sound very nice.

X-MEN: DARK PHOENIX

Release Date: 2 November

This is the movie that fans have been waiting for since X-Men: The Last Stand first adapted The Dark Phoenix Saga for the screen. This movie will track the comics more closely. The Dark Phoenix can be expected to be unleashed in full capacity in this film, and a concept art piece shows Dark Phoenix surrounded by spacecraft.

MORTAL ENGINES

Release Date: 14 December

Colossal cities on wheels roving about the Earth growing larger by cannibalising smaller settlements? Bring it on! This is going to be a steampunk fest directed by Peter Jackson, which means that it is going to be epic as well. The movie is set in the distant future, so there may be some surprises from mankind's murky past.

AQUAMAN

Release Date: 21 December

Aquaman was one of the highlights of Justice League, apart from Superman managing to keep his eyeballs on Flash. This superhero movie is expected to feature plenty of underwater action in the suboceanic realm of Atlantis. This is the movie that could very well decide the future of the DC Extended Universe.
