

THE DIGIT COMMUNITY IS FILLED WITH BRIGHT IDEAS and we find the best among the best every month to bring them to you in this section.

Bungie wants to change Destiny 2, in a good way

In response to a wave of criticism, Bungie has decided to act.

Gowtham Kumar | feedback@digit.in ungie has announced a wide variety of changes to Destiny 2. The developer has pledged to be more open about its development plans and admitted that “the scales are tipped too far towards Tess now,” referencing the in-game shopkeeper who runs Eververse.

B

In the game store “was never intended to be a substitute for end-game content and rewards,” which was turned into one for hardcore players. To change this, developer Bungie has defined many changes in their new blog post.

Bungie says that they’re planning on “shifting the balance of new content in favour of activity rewards over Bright Engrams,” for beginners. So they’ll be adding Ghosts, Sparrows and Ships to achievement reward pools. They were only obtained through Bright Engrams up until now. A “gameplay path” will be introduced to allow players to get Bright Engrams and their rewards, these changes are also applicable to Event Engrams. Moreover, Bungie wants players to be able to purchase whatever items they want, rather than get Bright Engrams first and then using the same to get what they want.

These changes will be implemented on February 13. That’s when the Crimson Days event begins. Season 3 will start with a lot of changes. You can earn rewards during the event by reaching a certain milestone, these rewards include Legendary emotes (for the Nightfall milestone), weapon skins (Raid milestone), and Exotic Sparrows (Crimson Days milestone). You can earn both a Crimson Engram and an Illuminated Engram during the event.

Finishing the Crimson Days milestone with each of your characters can earn you more Crimson Engrams.

Bungie agrees that the current manner for earning XP is not perfect, but they are continuing to look at how quickly XP is earned. “Right now, it’s too slow in general and lopsided towards grinding specific activities (which is not a fun) and we want to fix that without making those activities low value to players who aren’t grinding them (fairness is cool),” Bungie explained. “Our first attempt turned out to be unworkably buggy so we’re having to investigate other angles. We will continue to update you as we move forward.”

Coming to free content and paid content, there are three tiers of content: expansion, seasons, and Eververse. The expansion is basically paid DLC, which adds new story, destinations, and gear, as well as new Crucible, Strike, and Raid Lair content. For new legendries and exotics, destination rewards, and additional campaign content, you will require paid DLC.

Iron Banner, Faction Rallies, and their rewards will be free to all players. New seasonal rewards from Crucible, Strikes, and Trials of the Nine will be available to all players. These are the outline of the Bungie’s development update post. [\[1\]](#)

