

book their appointment from that particular site. Now put this URL on a publicly available website and people can come in and book their appointments in a slot that is free. The use of appointment slots is not limited to this. It's a very handy tool with many possibilities.

Notifications via SMS and Daily Agenda

You can setup Google Calendars to get notifications about an event via a SMS. To do so, you'll need to go to settings and register your mobile phone. Once that is done, select the calendar for which you want to receive notifications (you can get notifications from multiple

You need to verify your mobile number before receiving notifications via SMS

You can select how much Google Calendar can nag you about an event calendars). Select when you'd like to be reminded before the event. You can also select how to get a reminder via an email, SMS or a pop-up.

You can also have your daily agenda sent to you (this is sent at 5:00 in the morning), which lists all the events scheduled for the day and hence you can plan your day better. You can also tell Calendar to send you notifications about events like change of time, cancellation, responses and so on.

Just click on the check box to make your calendar public

Weather inside your calendar

Most of us aren't lucky enough to have our phones tell us about the weather. Google Calendar has a nifty little feature that shows weather forecast for the coming days so you can plan you you're done. When you return to the calendar home page you'll see a small icon at the beginning of each day showing that day's weather prediction.

This is how weather is shown in Calendar

Todo lists

Todo lists have always been an excellent way to boost productivity. Basically a list of all tasks

This is how a task list looks that you have to perform in a day. You go on striking out the ones you've completed. Google Calendar has integrated this feature as Tasks. You just select the Tasks from My Calendars and a pane will pop up on the right-hand side of the screen. You can now add items to your task list. Click on the checkbox as soon as you're done with the task and the item will be striked-out.

Public calendars

Similar to Google Docs, you have the option of making your calendar public. When you choose to do this, all of your events will appear in the public search results of Google Calendar and Google Web Search. Additionally, everyone can add it to their calendar list or use your Calendar Address. You can make your calendar public by clicking down arrow near the appropriate calendar and then select "Share this calendar". In the screen that follows, select "Make this calendar public". You can also share your free/busy information, without the details.

You'll find the weather settings for Google Calendar on the calendar settings page