

Julian Assange to host talk show responds smoothly and is built solidly yet with a generous dose of good looks. The display offers amazing black levels. With the arrival of Windows Phone 7.5 (Mango), the fortunes of Microsoft's smartphone OS have completely turned around, for the better. The update has improved the OS considerably. So much so that we believe it will give Android a run for its money in 2012. Having experienced this OS running very smoothly on phones that are not very powerful, we believe that this is the best chance for Microsoft to get a march on Android with more (and better to use) phones at a price under ₹20,000 as well.

LG Optimus 2X P990

Not quite the sensation we had hoped this would be. Yes, we are talking about the HTC Sensation, and it was a disappointment, the moment you moved beyond the gorgeous looks and an amazingly premium feel. The phone was besieged with network issues, and the Wi-Fi had the grip of death issue. This was the final nail in the coffin of an otherwise good phone that didn't let us down in terms of the Android experience. The 4.3-inch display is perfect for someone who wants to be able to type messages quickly, and browse a web page with relative comfort.

The camera specs on the Arc S are by far the best on paper – image stabilisation, video stabilisation and the ability to take a 3D Panorama Shot. Luckily, the resultant images and pictures are very good. 3D Panorama images are good as well, with the only issue being the panning speed, which takes some effort to get right. However, it does have issues with the network, and we won't recommend this phone.

Winner

Only the Best Buy crown was awarded in this ₹20,000 to ₹29,999 smartphone category, since the overall performance crown went to a smartphone that didn't fall in the specified price bracket. The LG Optimus 2X P990 is the Best Buy if you're looking for a sub-30k smartphone. It simply has the best combination of hardware features and performance at the given price, which is still unbeatable. If you can't muster up enough cash to buy any of the newer, sexier smartphones launched in the last couple of months. Noteworthy mentions include the Sony Ericsson Xperia Arc S and the Nokia Lumia 800, a classy Windows Phone 7.5 device.

₹30,000 and above:

This is where the competition becomes even tougher.

Nokia Lumia 800

What we witness in this category is a battle of the dual core processors, barring one phone – the BlackBerry Bold Touch 9900. And yes, this price bracket also sees the introduction of the big smartphone – the 5-inch display and above phones.

We start things in this category with the Samsung Galaxy S II. If we discount the Galaxy Note from the discussion for a few minutes, this is the real Android challenger to the iPhone. The performance is absolutely mind-blowing – the best performance of an Android device by far, this side of a 5-inch
