

Networking

Most of us have wireless networks at home these days, and it's no surprise to us that this is another popular category this year. Of course the upgrade cycle is longer, and thus we tend to stick with products for longer.

This is perhaps why we didn't expect too many changes in this category, and boy were we wrong. Yes, D-link still has a stranglehold on this category, at least in your minds. Over the past year or so we've seen brands pay more attention to design and style, in an attempt to get you to show off your router, instead of trying to conceal it. If the churn that happened from second spot onwards is any indicator... it's worked!

Desktops

Although not the most popular technology category anymore in India, it still is pretty popular with enthusiasts, which means it's an important category for Digit. We didn't actually do this category last year, and many of you wrote in to ask us to revive it, so we have. Of course this doesn't mean there's been any real change in expectations. We expected Dell to run away with the accolades, and it did. HP/Compaq came in second, and the Do-it-yourself attitude of the community shows, because "Assembled" came in third. While a whopping 47.1 per cent of people thought of "Dell/Alienware" first when it came to Desktops (as opposed to 20.6 per cent for HP/Compaq, more people owned the latter). Surprisingly, we found Acer to be lower on the overall trust index than even Apple, which was a bit of a shock for us. Let's face it, Apple makes great products, but their Desktop PCs aren't setting any records for sales in India!
