PS3 network

I have a Sony VAIO with a TATA Photon prepaid connection with PS3 Media Server setup and have setup the laptop as a wireless router. The PS3 connects to the internet over WiFi. But I am unable to connect the PS3 and PS3 Media Server. Can someone please help me out.

A Do the PS3 and laptop have fixed IP addresses?

Try looking at firewall settings on the laptop. It should be working, so also check the PS3 media server settings. Try opening Windows Media Player and using that as the media server, see if the PS3 can detect that instead.

Start normally or Repair?

I own a Sony VAIO laptop with the following configuration:

- Model No: VPCEB34EN
- OS: Genuine Windows 7 Home basic
- Processor: Intel Core i3-370M
- Hard disk drive: 320 GB
- RAM: 512 MB

About two months ago I was watching a movie on my laptop but it suddenly shut down and when I restarted it was showing "Windows failed to start. A recent hardware or software change might be the cause". It then showed me two options

"Launch Startup repair" and "Start Windows normally."

When I chose the first option a blue screen appeared and then nothing happened. I thought my laptop was getting repaired but it takes much longer quite a while before anything happens. Please help me in this matter. Should I format my laptop with a software CD or should I reboot it?

A Try the "Start Windows Normally" option. Sometimes due to sudden shut down you get this prompt. If your system is running fine and you shut down properly the next time around, you will not get this prompt again. If you "Launch Startup Repair", then you will need your Windows 7 installation disc in your DVD drive and you will need to select System Recovery option. The other method to get rid of this error is to over-ride this boot by
