

worldview

OUR PICK OF THE BEST TECH ARTICLES FROM AROUND THE GLOBE

(MUST READS)

WHERE ARE ALL THE GADGETS?

Remember how many gadgets we used to own a decade or so ago? Contrary to popular opinion and the impending Internet of Things, we almost definitely own fewer gadgets than we used to.

<http://dgit.in/15d9HuA>

THE INTERNET IS A SURVEILLANCE STATE

All of us are being watched, constantly. Google tracks us, Facebook tracks users and non-users, even Apple tracks us on its devices. The Internet is a Surveillance State that is worse than any of George Orwell's worst nightmares.

<http://dgit.in/102NrEm>

QUARTER OF SUN-LIKE STARS HAVE EARTH-LIKE PLANETS

Using data from NASA's Kepler space telescope, Geoff Marcy, professor of astronomy at the University of California, nearly 23 per cent of Sun-like stars have Earth-like planets around them.

<http://dgit.in/WssB1k>

SPAM AND COMPROMISED ISPS

According to a report only 20 ISPs were found responsible for nearly half of all the spamming IP addresses on the Web

<http://dgit.in/15dlUzs>

(Polygon Corner)

NINTENDO: AN INNOVATIVE PAST, UNIMAGINATIVE PRESENT, HOPEFUL FUTURE

The team over at Polygon sits down and has a long chat with the man who's pretty much synonymous with Nintendo: Shigeru Miyamoto. What follows is an unabashed disclosure about the gaming industry's most iconic company. <http://dgit.in/ZRKzla>

EA plans 16 titles for Galaxy S4

At the time of Samsung Galaxy S4's retail availability in mid-April around the world, EA will have The Simpsons: Tapped Out, Real Racing 3, The Sims FreePlay, Need for Speed: Most Wanted, Monopoly, and the recently announced Tetris Blitz and Bejeweled Blitz for the device.

<http://dgit.in/YzStDQ>

Ubisoft's plan to change storytelling in games

Go behind-the-scenes in this exclusive first look at how Ubisoft, of Assassin's Creed and Far Cry fame, is trying to make a radical change in the storytelling aspects of future video games. Say hello to Alice.

<http://dgit.in/13inELi>

FTL: The game that should've failed

Two unknown game developers start a Kickstarter project to fund their idea. The community raises over 20 times what they asked for. This is the story of how FTL: Faster Than Light, a game without a fanbase, without glittering graphics, made it big!

<http://dgit.in/ZA9Gzs>