

Use the Histogram to correct the exposure in your photographs

image has many pixels concentrated in the shadows. Move the sliders to improve the distribution of brightness levels.

Alternatively, use the Auto button to let Photoshop make the adjustments. Further, you can also adjust histogram of channels, i.e red, blue and green, if their distribution appears improper. For example, adjust the histogram for the blue channel if the sky looks dull in your photograph.