

how users can refer to slides and ensure smooth flow of data from the speaker to the audience during the presentation.

For printing your handouts, click on File > Print and in the 'Print' dialog box, click on 'Handouts' under the 'Print What' section. You can also get a preview of the handout print before you actually give the 'Print' command.

The Handout Master

4.2.6.3 Notes Master

The last and final master in PowerPoint 2003 is the 'Notes Master'. Notes are your personal, behind-the-scenes prompts to which you can refer. Notes Master is the master template that defines the style in which the notes appear to you. Similar to the other two masters, you can specify particular styles for the notes too.

The Notes Master

These are the most important things that you need to know when using PowerPoint 2003. In the next section, we will discuss the addition of charts, tables and other objects.

4.3 Charts and Tables

In the previous section, we have seen how to create slides and insert objects into slides. Customising slides was also discussed in