5.6.3 Permissions

In Outlook 2003, you can restrict what a recipient can do with e-mails he or she receives from you.

To prevent the recipient from forwarding, printing or copying the message, you can click ‘Permission’ on the toolbar—the icon with an envelope and a stop sign. The ‘InfoBar’—the grey area below the subject line—will show you info on what’s happened to the message after you clicked this option.

To use this feature, you need to have the ‘Windows Rights Management’ client. When you click ‘Permissions’ for the first time ever, a message box (see the adjoining figure) will pop up. It will ask whether to
