

Blogsome (www.blogsome.com), and Typepad (www.typepad.com), to name a few.

When you set up a blog, you create a login name and password (similar to creating an e-mail account), select a template that will house your information and also create a nickname (optional) to sign all your posts. Once you have the blog set up, you can post whatever information you like, whenever you want and as often as you want to.