

EchoVibes

<http://www.echovibes.com/>

Dedicated to helping Web designers bring life to their Web content (as they claim),

EchoVibes has a bundle of cool sound effects, all categorised. The site's interface is a little difficult to navigate—the images make no sense if you're running on a high resolution.

Sounddogs

www.sounddogs.com

The name itself inspires you to belt out numbers (“you ain’t nothing but a sound dog..”) from eras you forgot existed. You can choose from sound effects to vocals to loops, even telephone ring-tones. You can also get them in bulk “doggy packs”—themed collections of sounds, though these need to be paid for, unfortunately.

Flashkit

www.flashkit.com

You're going to find a lot of free loops here, but not without some effort—you'll find them hiding among loops that are copyright protected, so as long as you keep an eye out, you won't end up breaching any copyright laws.

Psy-Lab

www.psy-lab.com

Though it looks suspiciously like an advertising site (it is, for the most part anyway), some patient trawling will actually lead you to some useful sites with free downloadable music and sound effects.

