

4.2 Legal Torrents

BitTorrent isn't illegal by itself—it depends on what you download. There happen to be a few (but only a few) legal torrents around. Browse through www.legaltorrents.com/index.htm and <http://bt.etree.org/> to find some.

4.3 Internet Radio

We mention here only a couple of the large Internet radio portals, and a couple that have comprehensive sets of links. Some portals give you links to the radio pages, and some have “inbuilt” player windows. In many cases, you'll need to have RealPlayer installed.

Remember that (as for any Internet radio station) you'll need a “broadband” connection for the good sound! If you don't, there still is hope—you can find low-bitrate streams, too. A day of exploring the Web and you're bound to come up with a bunch of stations that can keep you musically entertained 24x7 on a dial-up connection as well.

Almost all popular genres. Free. You can also set up a radio server if you want—but we doubt you have the bandwidth! You can browse stations by genre, search for stations or genres, or browse through the near-650 pages of stations! You can also search by genre and bitrate (a cool feature). Just tune in, and Winamp will open (by default). Remember that (as for any Internet radio station) you'll need a “broadband” connection for the good sound! If you don't, there
