

Content options give you a greater security barrier

Tools > Options. Now, as with IE, go to the Privacy tab. Here you will find options for, among other things, Cookies. Under the Cookies tab, it is recommended that you enable cookies only for the originating site. It is also recommended to select the “unless I have removed cookies set by the site” option, in which case a Web site will get blacklisted from setting cookies on your computer if you have removed them manually.

The next security area is the Content tab. Under this, select the Block Popup Windows option, the function of which is self explanatory. Also select the next option, that is, “Warn me when

Download different file types on to your computer first

