

you already have. The site is meant for high school level students.

The Animation Quizzes are perhaps the most entertaining part of this site. You're shown a brief, informative cartoon of sorts about the topic in question, and you then need to answer a few quiz questions following it. It's fun even if you're not studying Biology!

For each lesson, you can download a PowerPoint presentation that summarizes the topic quite well. The images used are incredible, and overall, the presentations are well-structured and vibrant.

This textbook supplement does its job well

The Lecture PowerPoint presentations are excellent

Take a quick quiz based on an animation

3.2 General Interest And Interactive

The sites that follow aren't bookish at all—instead, they focus on learning about different aspects of Biology through interactivity and, well, non-bookish methods. Don't expect them to come to aid when you need to cram for a paper—they're more about the "joys of learning."