

6.6.5 Parental Controls

You can use Parental Controls to set controls over your children's interaction with the computer and manage these. For example, you can set limits on your children's access to the Web, the hours when they can log on to the computer, and which games they can play and programs they can run.

Parental Controls

User level parental controls

Parental Controls can only be applied to standard user accounts. Therefore, each child you wish to set up this feature for needs to have a standard account associated with him or her. Note that you will need an Administrator account in order to set up these controls. Moreover, these cannot be set up for an admin account.

When Parental Controls blocks access to a Web page or game, a notification is displayed that the page or program has been blocked. Your child can click a link in the notification to request

What Parental Control does

Getting parent's permission