

repair, or if you cannot boot to your computer, you can choose to restore your PC to a previously-saved image file. To start a complete

Bye bye paranoia with Complete PC Backup

PC restore, you must initialise it from system startup by booting the system through the Windows Vista DVD. Note here that restoring your computer to an image is a destructive process—all your data will be deleted, since partitions and drives that you wish to restore are formatted.

Insert the Windows Vista DVD disc and boot from it. Press Next and then select “Repair your computer”. Insert the media where you have backed up the image of your system, then click Next and select the “Windows Complete PC Restore” option from the “System Recovery Options” menu. Vista will let you choose the image file you wish to restore your computer to (if there are multiple images on your backup medium). By default, Vista will offer