

things considered, it is a handy addition to the list of features—certainly not something you cannot live without, but you'll be grateful they're there.

4.2.6 Google Maps

This is the last major feature in the iPhone and it does not disappoint. Eric Schmidt, Google CEO, joined Apple's board a few months ago and this is the first product to come out of the relationship between Apple and Google. As soon as you tap the Maps icon, it takes you to a map of the world (set by default to show you North America). There is a Google search field on the top in which you can enter the name of whichever place you want to go to. If you enter "San Francisco", for example, it will show you the map of California and will drop a red pin onto the map to point out the exact location of San Francisco. Now you can search for

The stock-ticker widget in action

Google Maps on the iPhone—though this isn't likely to be much use in India