

the cell where you can allow for scrolling. So say you want to freeze the first row and column—that is, row 1 and Column A—you need to select the cell B2 and then freeze panes.

Once you have decided on where you want to freeze the panes, you go to Window > Freeze. To unfreeze panes, do the same thing: Window > Freeze.

2.2.4 AutoFormat

Before you even begin a sheet, you can select from preset formats to make life easier. In order to use AutoFormat, open a new sheet and press [Ctrl] + [A] to select all the cells in the sheet. Now go to Format > AutoFormat and you will see the AutoFormat dialog box. You can browse through and preview all the preset formats listed there, and when you find something that fits the data you're going to be entering, select it and click OK. You should know that AutoFormat is used mainly for visual styles of your sheet—don't expect complex formulas to be preset for you.

Using AutoFormat to get the right look and feel to your sheet
