

from a variety of colour schemes. The themes in PowerPoint 2007, though not as numerous as those in 2003, are much easier on the eye (as are most of the new styles and effects), and won't lead to the garish monstrosities that some of the older themes were capable of creating.

3.1.4 The Animations Tab

This is your control centre for all the animation and effects you use in your presentation, right from transitions between slides to animations for the objects in your presentations. We'll get into animations in Chapter 15.

Get quick access to all animation functions here

3.1.5 The Slide Show Tab

Control your slide show from here

Here's where you set up your slide show. If you're sending a presentation by e-mail, you can record a narration and time slides accordingly, so your recipients can get the full effect of your presentation (and you might be saved the ignominy of watching them nod off halfway through). More on this in Chapter 10.

The Review tab lets you, well, review your presentation