

PowerPoint 2003: Modifying the Font Style in the slide master

toolbar. By default, the Title Master will inherit some of the text and font properties from the Slide master. That is, if the Slide Master uses Bold Italic Arial 44 pt for its title, the Title Master will have a similar font. However, depending on your style and design considerations, you can either retain the font or choose to change it to, say, just italicised Arial at 35 pt. This goes for other elements like colour schemes and so on. Once the Title Master is created, you can customise some or all the elements there in the same way as you would in the Slide Master. Any changes you make to the Title master will override the inherited properties.

Similarly, in PowerPoint 2007, you can format the text, font styles, and add graphics and specific elements to the different placeholders in the various layouts of the slide master. A slide master has a specific name and each individual layout will also have a specific name. It is a good idea to name your layouts and slide masters for easy identification and recall later on.

Unlike in PowerPoint 2003, where you are limited to a fixed layout of placeholders for the Slide and Title Masters, in
