

Every new paragraph takes a new number ical sequence rather than being individual points, you'd find the Numbered list a better mode of presentation. Just as with the bullet list, each numbered item is considered to be a new paragraph.

Formatting Numbered Bullets

Numbered bullets can be formatted the same way non-numbered bullets can. However, if you want to change the style of numbering, you'll have to go a longer way than just clicking on the Numbering button—either through the Format > Bullets and Numbering > Numbered method or by right-clicking and then Bullets and Numbering > Numbered (in the case of PowerPoint 2007, right-click > Numbering).

The numbers in your list start at one, by default, but this can be changed