

the film – as used to be the case) inside your camera would not receive an input at all.

The aperture is the (w)hole thing

It all becomes much easier to understand if you just compare it with the mechanism of the human eye. The aperture is nothing but a mechanical iris. The iris of your eye has mus-

The camera is like another eye