

LCD Monitors

With DX 11 around the corner and the latest slew of pre-holiday season games about to hit the market, what better time to upgrade my ageing LCD monitor. I own a ViewSonic VX2025WM, a 20.1-inch LCD that I love for its superb 8-bit, MVA panel. But over the years, my usage patterns have changed, and I use my PC for image editing and coupled with gaming this dictates a larger display. Since I'm always glued to my screen, I also use my computer for watching movies and this is a daily affair. Now bigger is always better and after testing LCD monitors this year and seeing the gorgeousness of some of the new monitors, I knew I just bad to upgrade.
