

is for minimizing the current window to the Dock. Double clicking the title bar also accounts for doing the same thing.

3. The Green Button: It displays a plus sign on mouse over and is for the maximization operation.

Next is the Proxy Icon (The folder icon with stylised “A” written on it. This will change according to which window is opened and can be dragged onto Desktop or other viable areas to create aliases (shortcuts) or copies (use in conjunction with the options key).

Then you see the name of the window and that is pretty much it as far as the functionality of it goes.

Notice the absence of sidebar and the preview pane

The blank button you see at the top-right of some windows such as finder is for a concise view of that particular window as illustrated in the screenshot below

3.1.4 Files and folders

Obvious as it may sound folders is a place where you keep your files, but Mac OS features two special kind of folders in addition to the normal regular folders, one being the Smart folder and other being the Burn folder. We will start with the regular.
