

machines. Not only can you run a Virtual Machine of Linux if you are stuck in a windows environment because of an unknown force of the ancient Greeks, but also you can run multiple virtual machines on the same physical machine (assuming it can handle the load) to replicate a small network and experiment or play with it without causing any real damage. Consider it as your network simulator, so without any further delay, set one up and fire the terminal. 