

you are providing hosting services, clicking on the link but leaving without making a purchase, there's a problem somewhere and you need to investigate – urgently. This is an area of concern that you need to look into. Probably you don't have the right prices, or you're not describing yourself well. People need to be aware of your service, only then will they opt for you as their service provider.

You can ensure you cover your costs as long as you price the packages right. The real problem with bulk hosting lies with inventory management and making money while you have a majority of your stock unused

You can ensure you cover your costs as long as you price the packages right. The real problem with bulk hosting lies with inventory management and making money while you have a majority of your stock unused. Some resellers accounts such as resellerclub offer you a pay-as-you-go model where there is no inventory management and no capital lost in terms of disk space and bandwidth lying idle. With such an account, as a reseller, you only need to worry about marketing. This way your risk is nearly eliminated. More on this later.
