more interested in looking at prices and analyse your offering on that front. The former will look at some of the ancillary services that your website offers such as web design and development. For them the idea is to make them feel that yours is a one stop shop for all their needs. Another important need of the hour is to highlight at least one offering that will help you stand out from the others. What is that one thing that helps differentiate you from others? Perhaps it could be a local touch. For instance you could have two separate catchment sites for your service. One can be the main website such as say spaceindia.com (just an example) while the other could be a local website that could only service local business such as kanpurhosting.com (again just an example). Take the case of empirehosting.com a simple entrepreneur who has started a reseller business. He has come up with innovative packages and names for the packages. He calls his basic package Hatchling, followed by Baby, Warrior and Legendary.

This kind of innovative naming and positioning can help you go a long way.
