

HOSTED APPS AND PACKAGED APPS

A guide to choosing and implementing the right kind of app

Google Chrome offers you the option of publishing your app in two ways – hosted or packaged. Sometimes it's hard to decide which one you need to publish. We'll try to highlight what characterises each of them and the various parallels, as well as the differences between them, so that you can make the right choice for your app.

What are apps?

In the context of Chrome and the Chrome Web Store, an app is an application that you run inside your browser with a dedicated user interface and user interaction. They're also known as installable web apps, and they're essentially a way of making Chrome treat certain web sites like apps.
