

Five Icon Dock

Squeezes in five app icons in the dock, instead of the regular four. There are complementary Five Icon Switcher, and Five Icon folder which do the same thing on other elements of the homescreen. There's also a tweak called "FiveIRows" that adds an extra row to the 4x4 grid of icons on the homescreen.

SpringFlash

In many situations, the iPhone might also double up as a torch. While there exist apps on the App Store solely for this purpose, it takes a lot of time to find the app on the homescreen and wait for it to launch. SpringFlash lets you assign a physical button that turns up your iPhone's camera LED when you press it.

Infinifolder, Infiniboard

These are two separate tweaks, costing $1.99, that enable infinite scrolling, one in folders while the other on the homescreen. This removes the limit to the number of icons a homescreen or a folder can have.

Zephyr

iPads on iOS 5 have multitouch gestures enabled, so that you can pinch with four fingers to close apps and return to your homescreen, swipe left and right with four fingers to switch between apps. Apple didn't choose to add this to the iPhone, presumably due to the lack of screen real estate. Thanks to a jailbreak tweak named "Zephyr" you can easily multitask with gestures on your iPhone. It's available for $4.99.

IntelliScreenX

The iPhone's lockscreen is really static, and you can't really do much from it. It was only in iOS 5 that the Notification Center was introduced, and although it did improve the situation a bit, it still didn't fare very well in terms of functionality.

IntelliScreenX is a jailbreak tweak that super charges your lockscreen, so that you could get a variety of things done without even unlocking your phone. Here are a few screenshots of the tweak running on an iPhone, and as you see it adds tons of information including weather, Twitter, Facebook, mail and RSS feeds. It also gives you the ability to message your friends right from the lockscreen.
