

you giving random details of your life to unknown people. This, in turn can be used to harass or blackmail you – or in short, for cyberstalking. If you were dumb enough to make personal information accessible to the unknown account, a clever social engineering attempt would be made on claims to your entire identity. So please beware. 