

Lose It!

Good exercise is not enough; what you eat matters equally. Lose It! is a simply designed, non-intimidating application that helps you keep a track of your food intake. Enter your details, how much weight you want to lose and by when. It keeps a track of consumed carbs, proteins and fats, and gives you a heads-up on your calorie intake limit. Although there's a comprehensive database of food preparations in the app, if something you're eating is not listed, you can update the info.

Trails

If you want to track your hiking, biking or jogging journeys and plot them on a map for later viewing, Trails is a good app to have. You can chalk out a path on the map before your journey, and Trails will cache that part of the map for offline use — very useful in secluded areas with bad network. You can pause and resume the app when you want. It records the altitude as well. You can export all this data and plot your journey on a computer using OpenStreetMaps or popular adventure sites such as everyTrail.com and bikely.com.
