

Snapseed

For those you suffering from Instagram fatigue or just looking to do more with your pictures, Snapseed is the app for you. It was voted as the Best Mobile Photo App of 2012 and the iPad App of the Year. With its auto-enhancement features, Snapseed will turn your average photo into a frame-worthy picture. You know how Instagram requires you to resize your photos? Well, Snapseed lets you edit your photo without resizing. It also lets you add various effects and edit different parts of the picture. Not to forget, it lets you share pictures across Twitter, Flickr, Facebook, Tumblr and Foursquare. So click a photo, tweak it, love it and share it with Snapseed.

Price: Free

Link: <http://dgit.in/Xc7Hm3>

Vine

Twitter has taught us to express ourselves in 140 characters or less. And now, it has acquired Vine, an app that wants us to capture life in motion in the form of six-second videos. Twitter's Vine is a mobile service that lets you create and share beautiful, short, looping videos. The app lets you create and share six-second videos by capturing and stitching clips together. Barely a couple of months old, Vine already has tons of people creating and sharing amazing art work in its community. Not to forget, the app is quick, simple to use and is a great tool for sharing moments in a unique way. Although, the app is currently available only on iOS, here's hoping that the fun Vine app will soon make its way to other platforms too. If you like quirky and love stop-motion, Vine is an app you wouldn't want to miss out on.

Price: Free

Link: <http://dgit.in/XFpF7A>