

Holo Launcher HD

Android looks so different on every phone that sometimes it's hard to imagine that they all have the same OS on the inside. Holo Launcher HD gives people using a non-Nexus phone a chance to experience the simplistic, elegant design language that redefined Android. The dock, the familiar app drawer, the folder style — it's all there. The paid version has some other goodies that would interest even Nexus users; like badges on top of icons (just like iOS) and multi-finger gestures. To complete the experience, also get Holo Locker — an Android 4.0 Ice Cream Sandwich styled lock-screen replacement.

Price: Free

Link: <http://dgit.in/FTHoloLaunch>

exDialer

T9 dialling was one of the easiest ways to call somebody. Just start typing a name on the num-pad, and the contact dynamically shows up atop. It's only sad to see that it's not implemented in the stock Android dialer. With exDialer, you not only get T9-styled contact finding, but also the Samsung-styled swipe left over a contact to call and swipe right for SMS gestures. It can also search for contacts via fields like organization, nickname, postal address etc. If you get bored of the look, there are themes to change the appearance too.

Price: Free

Link: <http://dgit.in/FTexDialer>