

Recall

People tell us what to see, what to hear and what to read. We can't always remember all those recommendations, so we probably make notes about it in our phone. Now imagine if these notes understood context and appended useful information to that plain-jane lists. The moment you start typing the name of a movie, TV show, app, artist or book, Recall will fetch a synopsis of the same. It will also remind you later to check out what you've saved. Although Recall is worth paying for, if you prefer free, then give Done Not Done a try.

Google Maps

After the laughable disappointment that was Apple Maps in iOS 6, people are much at ease now that Google Maps is available from the App Store. Not only has Google included all features previously reserved for Android, but the clean UI design is also sheer pleasure to use. The app isn't cluttered with an array of buttons and menus. Other than finding directions from Point A to Point B, the app supports voice-guided turn-by-turn navigation. You also get public transport information and live traffic info (currently in major cities of India).
