

Fantastical

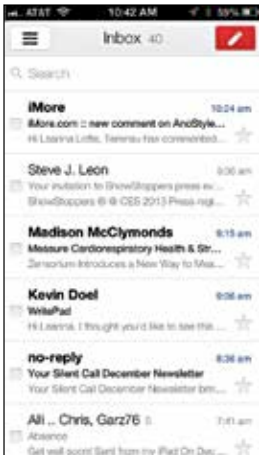

It might seem a little pricey for a Calendaring app, but as the name suggests, Fantastical does have some unique tricks up its sleeve to delight users. Its fast, simple and delicious interface is a dream. The Day Ticket shows your list of items scheduled, and swiping sideways glides between dates. It has a natural language engine that understands commands written in plain English, and converts them to entries in the calendar. You can also use Dictation to speak out your request and Fantastical calendars them in. Last but not the least, it can sync with Google Calendar, iCloud, MS Exchange and more.

Price: ₹275

Link: <http://dgit.in/FTFantastical>

Gmail

Using the same simple design elements as Google Maps, Gmail for iOS is yet another must-have if you're a user of the email service. It supports up to five accounts and gives you those familiar Gmail-specific features that we're used to by now. Stuff like threaded conversations, starring emails, labels, auto-completing your search query in the search box etc. A nice touch in conversation view is the display picture (if available), else a big bold first letter in the name of the person sending the mail. You can attach photos from the Gallery within the app itself.

Price: Free

Link: <http://dgit.in/FTGmail>