

BLACKBERRY

Opera Mini

Opera Mini is a good browser to keep handy in case you plan to surf full-size websites on that tiny BlackBerry screen. Any website you load first goes through compression via Opera's servers, thereby loading faster (especially useful on a 2G connection). It has an easy-to-use interface with a Google search bar right next to the address bar and a one-click access to your most visited sites. It supports multi-tab browsing, has a built-in download manager and can also remember your passwords. Last but not the least, it has an overall smooth operation making the browser experience better.

Price: Free

Link: <http://dgit.in/FTOperaBB>

Google Maps

Although Google's new mobile website may not show BlackBerry as a choice of operating system, there's a way to still get the old Google Maps app for your BB (click the link and go to Google Maps from the list). As the Apple Maps fiasco has shown, Google is way ahead of the mapping game than the rest of the crowd. Having Google Maps on any phone is nothing but useful — it shows you maps with good detail, directions from Point A to Point B, satellite view, traffic and points of interest.

Price: Free

Link: <http://dgit.in/WXYAEo>