

Flipboard

Flipboard is the premier content aggregation app that got its claim to fame thanks to the app's fluid and easy navigation. To read through the headlines, or even move to the next page, you just have to keep "flipping" — that is sliding your thumb bottom-up. It pulls content from the best of news sources and organizes them according to not just algorithms, but also actual human editors who handpick content to show. It also lets you log into your Facebook and Twitter, so that your timelines on either social network can also be browsed through the same 'flipping' method.

Price: Free

Link: <http://dgit.in/FTFlipBd>

Zite

Zite is yet another app like Flipboard for aggregated content. But the difference lies in its design (especially the iPad version), which is uniquely delightful. Also, we've seen content from a wider variety of publications, especially smaller blogs, find a place on Zite. Like all social magazine apps, Zite extracts only the relevant text and images, so you get a consistent reading experience. It also has a feedback system where it will adapt to the kind of content you like to read, if you tell it what you liked, and what you didn't.

Price: Free

Link: <http://dgit.in/FTZite>