

its last avatar. To write a new message simply touch the pen and note icon in the top right. You can add a saved contact by touching the plus sign that's to the right of the number's field or you can manually enter the number using the iOS keyboard. If you choose a saved contact the screen switches you to the last saved SMS conversation from your messaging history. You can easily see the exchange from before and proceed to send the new message. The space for writing your message is an empty box just above the keyboard with the send button conveniently placed to its right. You can cancel the message anytime by touching Cancel in the top right.

iMessage: Sending messages through iMessage requires an active data plan. Linked to your iCloud or email account, iMessage allows you to send messages to other Apple users who have iMessage active. Similar to the Blackberry Messenger app messages appear as Sent, Delivered and Read. Along with your text you also have the option of sending photographs or videos. To do so touch the small camera icon to the left of the text box. You will be prompted to either select a photograph or video from your phone or take one just then. Caution: any media sent across iMessage eats into your data plan so send cautiously.

While looking at an earlier messaging conversation you will see the name or number of the contact at the top of the screen. If you need more information just click on "Contact" to the top right and a slider menu will pop out. This menu allows you three options: directly call, directly FaceTime or more information.

In an on-going conversation in the messaging app you will notice that the gaps between sequential responses are proportional to the time taken

Much love for FastTrack
