

party devs create their own apps using Feedly's backend. One such app that shines is Newsify, that can sync your subscriptions with either Feedly or iCloud, and presents the articles in either a newspaper-style view or the more traditional list view. It offers support for offline reading, multiple accounts, sharing to other networks like Facebook, Twitter, Delicious, Evernote, Pocket or Tumblr and Night Mode for easier reading. The app went free from its previous price of $0.99, so there's no reason this shouldn't be your feed-reader of choice on iOS.

16. Circa

Circa's a news app that delivers only the most important sections of each story, providing an effective way to catch up on what's happening when you have just a few minutes to spare. The app focuses on breaking-news stories, providing updates as the story develops. The stories are formatted into neat paragraphs, with successive paragraphs hidden from view until you choose to view them. It's quite visually appealing with large, beautiful photos, but we wish the list of news sources was customizable.

17. Soundwave

Soundwave is an app that lets you instantly share what music you're listening to on your iOS device, either through the Music app or through any streaming app such as Rdio or Spotify. You can follow your friends or celebrities to see what they're listening to, serving up a great way to discover new

Newsify's newspaper-like layout is a great way to read your feeds

Circa presents the latest news stories in bite-sized snippets.